Sometimes my Head Hurts: Managing the Complexities of Youth Work

Monday 24th June 2013, 10.00am—4.00pm

The Learning Exchange • Flaxman L225 • Staffordshire University
College Road • Stoke on Trent • ST4 2DE

What is it?

The context of youth work is changing, and managers of services in the voluntary, statutory and private sectors need to be able to manage these complexities. This masterclass will present a range of management tools to support you to identify the variables impacting on your work, your management style and how to effectively manage in a multi-agency context.

How will the masterclass be delivered?

The day will be a combination of practical ideas with a theoretical context. We will use participative methods to generate discussion and ideas.

What will I get out of the day?

The masterclass will provide you with an opportunity discuss managing youth work in the current political and economic climate and to network with other people interested in developing a positive future for working with young people. You will also be introduced to a range of management tools adapted to a youth work context.

Will I be assessed?

No. This masterclass will not be assessed, you just attend the day and take part in the discussions and activities.

Who will deliver the masterclass?

The masterclass will be delivered by Nic Gratton and Pete Twilley, both senior lecturers at the University with many years youth work experience.

How much will it cost?

The masterclass costs £60 to attend. You can also opt to receive an additional 2 hours with a tutor to help you to put your learning into practice. This additional tutor time costs an additional £40.

What if I have further questions?

If you would like to find out more about this masterclass or want to find out if the course is right for you, feel free to call one of the tutors:
